STATE CHAMBER TO HOLD
ANNUAL MEETING OCT. 19

Agricultural, industrial and civic notables from all parts of the state will unite in a review of Alabama progress at the annual meeting of the Alabama State Chamber of Commerce, called by Benjamin Russell, president, for Thursday, October 19. The meeting will consist of an all-day program at which the State Chamber will take stock of its year's work of "Building Alabama."

The annual gathering of State Chamber members from all parts of the State is expected to be the most representative assembly of both large and small industrial and agricultural interests ever held in Alabama. An accurate picture of present-day Alabama will be provided by speakers at the session.

Calling attention to recent developments in Alabama industry and agriculture, President Russell said the annual meeting will emphasize accomplishments during the past year and outline objectives for the coming year.

"Definite progress has been made during the year just closing in the program of the Alabama State Chamber of Commerce," Mr. Russell said. "The State Chamber itself has several major accomplishments and other agencies have carried forward many projects in our program."

"We feel that the time has come to review how far we have come and to chart a course which will lead to greater progress during the coming 12 months."

The morning session will consist of addresses on the progress made during the past year. Mr. Russell will speak along with several other officials of the chamber and the business session will be held during the afternoon. The annual meeting will close with a banquet at that night.

So the Forest Service economists believe the forests of the South will provide a sound basis for a secure future. Industry if they are properly managed, protected and conserved, will be a source of continuous succession of timber crops that will be a permanent resource for a permanent industry.

It is essential that the man who speaks for God should first see the Lord high and lifted up and to hear of His holiness and glory. The negative tone of the present-day message, the lack of enthusiasm and interest in holy things, the low standards of personal holiness, the failure to regard the truth regarding God's holy standards are to be explained by the fact that there has been no vision of the eternal holiness and glory of God. The need of the people today is the same as it was in the time of Isaiah. Where are the men and women who are ready for a vision like his and for the commission which will follow?

"'Who is Me! for I Am Undone'" (v. 5).

To see the holiness of God is to be immediately conscious of one's own sin and unworthiness. The obvious conclusion which one draws from that fact is that anyone who is proud, who is not concerned about his own sins and the sins of his people, is living far from God and has either never known or has forgotten about His divine holiness.

Isaiah spoke of the pollution of his lips, thereby confessing that his heart was not right. Wherever the heart is full, there is speech. The heart is full of the abundance of the Lord's mouth speaks. Remember that even though Isaiah was a believer he recognized the need of cleansing.

III. "Then . . . He Touched My Mouth" (v. 6, 7, 8, 9).

"Then" — what an important word! When Isaiah called out in humble confession, "When" he was cleansed. The turning point is right at that place for any life. Only when we come to the place of confession and contrition which Isaiah knew, we can expect the Lord to send the cleansing fire and the enabling power.

None but God can give this cleansing. Man is unable to wash himself clean. "For though thou wash with soap, yet thine iniquity is marked before me, saith the Lord" (Jer. 2:22). See also Jer. 13:23. Reformation, turning over a new leaf, character development, all commendable and also of blessed import. There must be divine cleansing of the life if there is to be a commission to service.

IV. "Here Am I; Send Me" (v. 8, 9).

God had a difficult and unpopular message to be delivered but now he had a man who was ready to carry it. Isaiah had to proclaim to Israel that because they had turned from the sunshine of God's love, which would have melted their hard hearts, it had for them become the sunshine of His wrath, which could only progressively harden them and turn them from Him. The same sunshine that melts the wax hardens the mud.

The word of God in our day awaits the man or the woman of vision—the one who has been prepared by confession and cleansing and who has then received the divine commission.

Path. Of all the forces at the disposal of humanity, faith has always been one of the most tremendous, and the gospel rightly attributes to it the power of moving mountains.

SOMETHING TO CELEBRATE

Next year will be the 500th anniversary of printing.

The American Institute of Graphic Arts is preparing to celebrate this event, one of the most important in the history of man. It is also approximately 400 years since the introduction of printing into the New World and about 300 since the printing of the first book in what is now the United States.

Libraries, schools, newspaper, book and periodical publishers are all planning to join in observing the anniversary.

That is proper, for it was printing from movable type that first brought learning within reach of the common man. Perhaps this will some day be regarded as his greatest victory. He will do well not to throw away lightly by cultivating the eye for the permanence, the clarity, the beauty of the printed word.

It is a gift whose precious gift has become slightly tarnished by familiarity. If the Institute can do anything to refurbish it in our minds, it will have served us well.

TRY THIS ON YOUR TABLET

Here is an ingenious little thing to play with in an old five minutes.

Write down your telephone number, double it, add five, multiply by fifty, add this year (1939), add the number of days in a year (365), subtract the number of U. S. Congressmen (810), and you will find the answer gives you first your telephone number and then your age this year.

FORESTRY IS PROMISING INDUSTRY IN LOWER SOUTH

AUBURN, Ala.—It took a long time for the lumber industry to get its throne one of these days. The U. S. Forest Service reports a woodman on a wood pile and a lumber pile may succeed him—at least in the lower South.

Completed a survey of the South's forest resources, the foresters find the lower South is capable of supporting a greatly expanded forestry industry—if the timber is managed on a sustained yield basis.

They report more than 10 thousand forest-planting plants in operation in Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, Louisiana, and parts of Texas, Oklahoma, and Arkansas. These include 8,000 sawmills, 1,100 turpentine stills, 24 pulp mills and many other forest products activities. Millions of dollars have been invested in new wood-crafting plants in this territory during the past few years. But there is still room for more, if care is taken.

If care is taken—that means that enough suitable forest lands need to be provided in order to prevent too much cutting. It means also that such lands need to be placed under sound forestry management. That means management to produce successive crops of good, healthy timber—each crop up to the full capacity of which the land, the climate and the trees can produce. The foresters found that at present the forest-growing stock is growing only about one-fourth or one-half as much as the sites can produce under proper management.

So the Forest Service economists believe the forests of the South will provide a sound basis for a secure future. Industry if they are properly managed, protected and conserved, will be a source of continuous succession of timber crops that will be a permanent resource for a permanent industry.

Isaiah spoke of the pollution of his lips, thereby confessing that his heart was not right. Wherever the heart is full, there is speech. The heart is full of the abundance of the Lord's mouth speaks. Remember that even though Isaiah was a believer he recognized the need of cleansing.

III. "Then . . . He Touched My Mouth" (v. 6, 7, 8, 9).

"Then" — what an important word! When Isaiah called out in humble confession, "When" he was cleansed. The turning point is right at that place for any life. Only when we come to the place of confession and contrition which Isaiah knew, we can expect the Lord to send the cleansing fire and the enabling power.

None but God can give this cleansing. Man is unable to wash himself clean. "For though thou wash with soap, yet thine iniquity is marked before me, saith the Lord" (Jer. 2:22). See also Jer. 13:23. Reformation, turning over a new leaf, character development, all commendable and also of blessed import. There must be divine cleansing of the life if there is to be a commission to service.

IV. "Here Am I; Send Me" (v. 8, 9).

God had a difficult and unpopular message to be delivered but now he had a man who was ready to carry it. Isaiah had to proclaim to Israel that because they had turned from the sunshine of God's love, which would have melted their hard hearts, it had for them become the sunshine of His wrath, which could only progressively harden them and turn them from Him. The same sunshine that melts the wax hardens the mud.

The word of God in our day awaits the man or the woman of vision—the one who has been prepared by confession and cleansing and who has then received the divine commission.

STATE CHAMBER TO HOLD

Agricultural, industrial and civic notables from all parts of the state will unite in a review of Alabama progress at the annual meeting of the Alabama State Chamber of Commerce, called by Benjamin Russell, president, for Thursday, October 19. The meeting will consist of an all-day program at which the State Chamber will take stock of its year's work of "Building Alabama."

The annual gathering of State Chamber members from all parts of the State is expected to be the most representative assembly of both large and small industrial and agricultural interests ever held in Alabama. An accurate picture of present-day Alabama will be provided by speakers at the session.

Calling attention to recent developments in Alabama industry and agriculture, President Russell said the annual meeting will emphasize accomplishments during the past year and outline objectives for the coming year.

"Definite progress has been made during the year just closing in the program of the Alabama State Chamber of Commerce," Mr. Russell said. "The State Chamber itself has several major accomplishments and other agencies have carried forward many projects in our program."

"We feel that the time has come to review how far we have come and to chart a course which will lead to greater progress during the coming 12 months."

The morning session will consist of addresses on the progress made during the past year. Mr. Russell will speak along with several other officials of the chamber and the business session will be held during the afternoon. The annual meeting will close with a banquet at that night.

So the Forest Service economists believe the forests of the South will provide a sound basis for a secure future. Industry if they are properly managed, protected and conserved, will be a source of continuous succession of timber crops that will be a permanent resource for a permanent industry.

An opussum is reported to be doing duty as rat catcher at the jail in Belleville, Illinois.

It is essential that the man who speaks for God should first see the Lord high and lifted up and to hear of His holiness and glory. The negative tone of the present-day message, the lack of enthusiasm and interest in holy things, the low standards of personal holiness, the failure to regard the truth regarding God's holy standards are to be explained by the fact that there has been no vision of the eternal holiness and glory of God. The need of the people today is the same as it was in the time of Isaiah. Where are the men and women who are ready for a vision like his and for the commission which will follow?

"'Who is Me! for I Am Undone'" (v. 5).

To see the holiness of God is to be immediately conscious of one's own sin and unworthiness. The obvious conclusion which one draws from that fact is that anyone who is proud, who is not concerned about his own sins and the sins of his people, is living far from God and has either never known or has forgotten about His divine holiness.

Isaiah spoke of the pollution of his lips, thereby confessing that his heart was not right. Wherever the heart is full, there is speech. The heart is full of the abundance of the Lord's mouth speaks. Remember that even though Isaiah was a believer he recognized the need of cleansing.
